Residents typically use NDIS packages to fund their support, which is provided by qualified and expert Mind Australia staff. They can help residents with activities for daily living, building social connections and other identified goals.

At a Haven, people have the option to use their NDIS funding collectively with fellow residents to get the most out of their NDIS plans. This means that assistance with tasks such as shopping, cooking, budgeting and getting together as a community can be shared – which benefits everyone at the Haven.

Our model also promotes and supports the involvement off family, friends and carers.

The wonderful thing is that all the residents have their own space and choose what they want to take part in or what support they need – we all have the chance to actively work on our recovery alongside one another and Mind staff.

Heather, Haven Frankston

I've been in hospital quite a few times for a few years while I've suffered. But now since living at Haven I don't have hospital visits anymore.

Shaun, Haven Pakenham

The community at Haven Pakenham is great; before I came here I only had my family, but here it's different because you are around people like you. You get along because they understand what you're going through.

Darren, Haven Pakenham

I've got a sense of freedom and independence now. At Haven I've got space when I want it, but support when I need it.

Jenni, Haven Frankston
